"There is something that is much more scarce, something finer far, something rarer than ability."

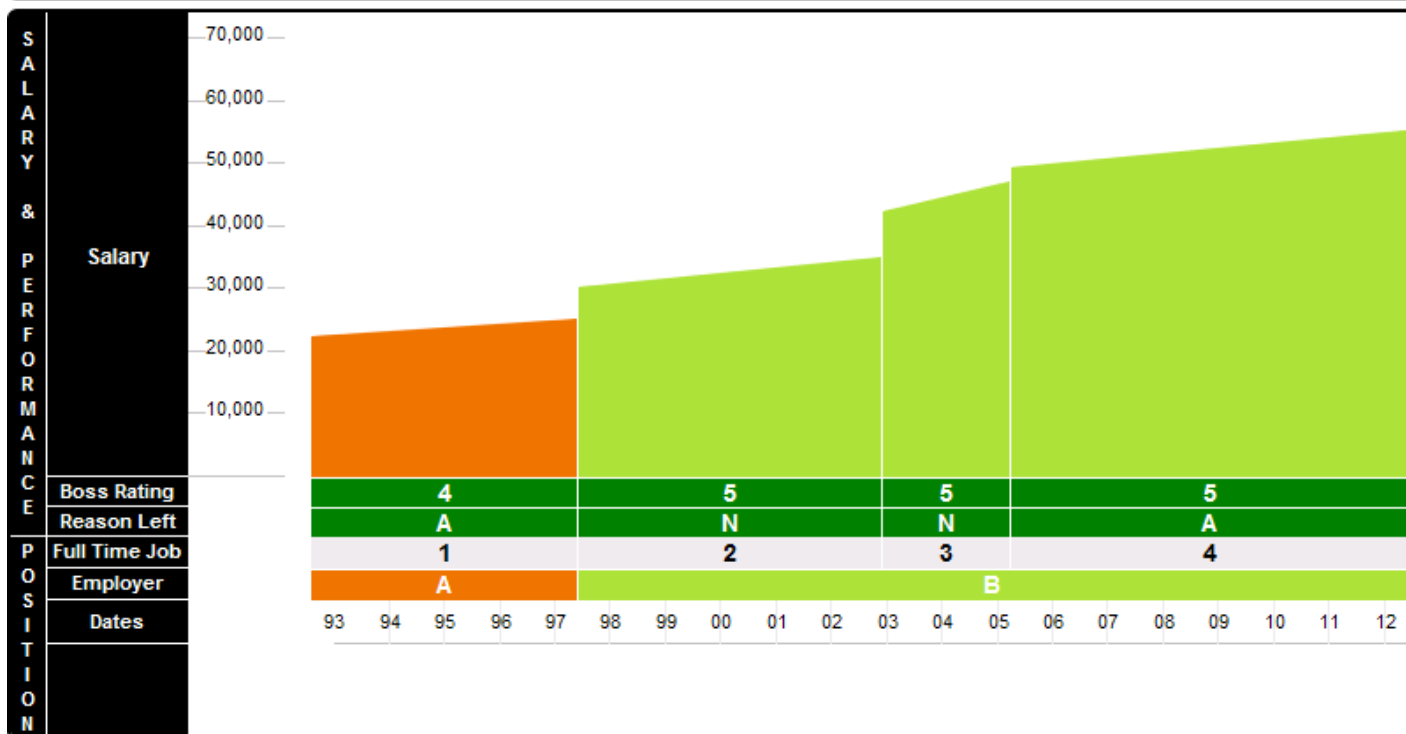

"It is the ability to recognize ability."- Elbert Hubbard

This guide seeks to provide you with the most accurate, most valid, insights when assessing internal talent and candidates to hire. SUGGESTIONS TO INTERVIEWERS

Maximum benefits in using this Topgrading Interview Guide can be achieved through applying the principles stated in the book:

Topgrading: The Proven Hiring and Promoting Method That Turbocharges Company Performance
by Dr. Bradford D. Smart (Penguin Portfolio, New York, 2012)

This guide is intended to make the interviewer's job easier. It is a comprehensive, chronological "road map," providing plenty of space to record responses. In case you need more space, have a pad of paper handy. Experience has shown the following guidelines to be helpful when interviewing selection candidates:

1. Review the candidate's Topgrading Career History Form and resume.
2. Be sure that the Job Scorecard, including accountabilities and other competencies, are clear to you and the team the successful candidate will work with.
3. Review this Guide prior to the interview, in order to refresh your memory regarding the sequence and wording of questions, for a smoother interview.
4. Use a tandem (two-interviewer) approach. A tandem interview is more valid than a solo interview, unless the Topgrading interviewer is highly experienced.
5. After a couple of minutes building rapport, give the interviewee an idea of the expected time frame (3 hours?) and then sell the person on being open and honest.

The Topgrading Interview is long and detailed, and helps us hire mostly high performers. The advantages to you of participating in it are to:

- Review your background, interests, and goals to see if there is a good fit with the position and opportunities here.
- Help you become highly productive, as soon as possible.
- Determine some ways to assure smooth onboarding, should you join us.
- Get some ideas regarding what you and we can do to maximize your long-range development.

6. Follow the chronological order starting with Education and then Work History, starting with the first full time job and coming forward to the present.
7. Following the Topgrading Interview:
 - Review the completed guide.
 - Write comments about each competency on the last three pages of this Guide, or on a Job Scorecard.
 - Make ratings of the competencies.
8. Ask candidates to arrange reference calls with supervisors and others you and your tandem interviewer choose to talk with. Knowing this requirement in advance of interviews, candidates will be more honest in responding to questions.
9. Write a brief report - an Executive Summary, followed by a list of Strengths, Weak Points, and Developmental Recommendations. High performers hired or promoted will want feedback and development recommendations from the interviewers.

NOTE: Candidates answers from the online Career History Form have been included in this Topgrading Interview Guide. The answers have been bolded and underlined. Questions to interviewers are italicized.

HIGH SCHOOL

NOTE TO INTERVIEWERS: Most experienced Topgrading interviewers start with high school, but if you are not experienced, start with COLLEGE. Why? Any interviewee will accept starting with COLLEGE, but it's rare for an interviewer to start with HIGH SCHOOL, so you will have to be confident and smooth - two attributes that will come with experience.

So that I can get a good feel for your background, first your education years and then work history, let's briefly go back to your high school days and come forward chronologically to the present. Then we'll talk about your plans and goals for the future. I see from the Career History Form that you attended Lincoln High School (high school). Would you please expand on the information provided by discussing high points, low points, how your summers were spent, work experiences, and any people who were strong influences, good or bad?

Now let's move on to your college years. So that I can get a feel for your background, first your education and then work history, let's briefly go back to your college years and come forward chronologically, up to the present. Then we'll discuss your plans and goals for the future. I see from the Career History Form that you attended University of Illinois (college). TALENT QUESTIONS

This is an extremely important section because:

1. You will learn a great deal about what the person's leadership style is like. As managers describe the strengths and weaker points of their best and worst subordinates, they unknowingly reveal what they really are like as a leader.
2. You will get valuable names for your Network. If a candidate joins you, be sure to ask him/her to stay in touch with those A Players described in this section.

Ask about all management actions with direct reports, accounting for how the "inherited team" became the "at the end" team. Ask how many people were recruited and selected, what approaches were used, how the people were trained and developed, how each worked out in the job, and for those who did not work out well, what happened with them (transferred to a job where successful, fired, or simply tolerated?). Determine the hiring batting average (how many good hires/promotions vs. mis-hires/mis-promotions). Also look for indications of diversity, positive versus negative feedback given, empowerment, fostering teamwork, and how people were/are held accountable. Most of all, look for success in packing the team with high performers and redeploying chronic underperformers.

(For management jobs) What sort of talent did you inherit (how many As, Bs, Cs)? What changes did you make, how, and how many As, Bs, and Cs did you end up with? (For most recent two jobs, get A, B, C ratings and strengths/weak points of each subordinate.) _____

Advantages

Disadvantages

SELF-APPRAISAL

Please indicate what you think the average rating would be by all the managers you've had in the past 5 years, on: (Possible Choices: Excellent, Very Good, Good, Fair, Poor, Impossible to Provide)

Judgment / Decision Making: Excellent

Team Player: Excellent

Resourcefulness / Initiative: Excellent

Likability: Excellent

Drive / Energy: Excellent

Leadership: Excellent

We would like you to give us a thorough self-appraisal, beginning with what you consider to be your strengths, assets, things you like about yourself, and things you do well.

Ask follow-up questions, and urge the person to continue. For example, you might say such things as "good," "keep going," "oh," nod and ask questions such as: "What other strengths come to mind?" "What are some other things you do well?" Obtain a list of strengths and then go back and ask the person to elaborate on what was meant by each strength listed-"conscientious," "hard working," or whatever.

STRENGTHS

Candidate's response from Career History Form: Highly resourceful, Topgrades with HR and with senior team, mastered HR best practices, team builder (HR), team player (with peers), high energy, connect HR to business strategy, highly loyal, always deliver results, able to use Technology (including social media) to boost HR results

Interview Responses:

OK, let's look at the other side of the ledger for a moment. What would you say are your shortcomings, weak points, or areas for improvement?

Be generous in your use of the pregnant pause here. Urge the person to list more shortcomings by saying such things as, "What else comes to mind?" "Keep going, you are doing fine," or just smile, nod your head and wait. When the person has run out of shortcomings, you might ask questions such as: "What three things could you do that would most improve your overall effectiveness in the future?" Obtain as long a list of negatives as you can with minimal interruptions on your part, and then go back and request clarification. (If you interrupt the individual for clarification on one, there might be so much time spent on that one negative that the individual will be very hesitant to acknowledge another one.)

WEAKER POINTS

Candidate's response from Career History Form: Push too hard at times -- President, peers, my own team. Need to get more buy-in, earlier and let others come up with ideas. Have not yet managed managers. Have not pushed my career along fast enough.

Interview Responses:
